SNAME's legacy has many facets. The thousands of ships designed and built by SNAME members and the millions of pages of research and technical papers are two of the most visible. But while the work of SNAME members is well recorded, the men and women who have been – and are – the Society have not been fully captured for current members or future generations.

SNAME is now taking steps to ensure that the rich personalities, academic expertise, and life lessons of its most prominent members are preserved.

Introducing the SNAME Heritage Series. Prominent SNAME members – experts and recognized icons in the marine industry – are being selected to participate in this special program of recorded interviews.

The Heritage Series will be a component of the SNAME Learning Program on our new website, www.SNAME.org. Starting this year, SNAME members, students, and the world-wide community will be able to access these recordings online. This rich content will be of outstanding value to current members and generations of members to come.

Each lecture will be as unique as its subject, featuring a video interview, an audio-only interview, and/or an audio-enriched presentation. Length can vary depend on the goals established by each expert. Once an outline or script is developed and a format chosen, SNAME will arrange for the appropriate venue and technology required to record the session. The Legacy Lectures from the Heritage Series will quickly become a treasure chest of invaluable first-hand knowledge of our industry and a testament to exceptional SNAME members.

SNAME is honored to have these most-respected professionals as members. Through the SNAME Heritage Series, they will continue to serve the highest goals, mission, and vision of the Society.
